

Daily mail - Site de notícias

Esse sistema se enquadra com uma perspectiva de mídia, visto que ele faz a mediação da comunicação entre pessoas, nesse caso entre autor da postagem e o usuário (leitor).

O sistema tem uma interface bem simples, se utiliza de uma home com uma lista de notícias que por sua vez direcionam o usuário para uma nova página com a notícia completa.

Tendo isso em vista seu principal defeito não está na sua funcionalidade, mas sim na disposição do seu conteúdo e em uma péssima responsividade.

O site utiliza um container de tamanho fixo e centralizado que agrupa todas as notícias do site. Para dispositivos com telas maiores como computadores, isso não é necessariamente um problema, porém quando levamos em conta dispositivos com telas menores, essa limitação acaba quebrando o layout do site.

Pontos negativos:

- Barra de navegação com muita informação
- Ausência de um input de procura
- Site sem responsividade
- Má disposição de elementos em tela
- Design datado

Possíveis melhorias:

Tornar site responsivo, de maneira que os componentes da página sejam redimensionados conforme o tamanho da página mude.

Diminuir a quantidade de itens na barra de navegação, assim como adicionar um input de procura. Uma possível maneira de diminuir a quantidade de itens seria utilizar um hambúrguer button.

Reducir a quantidade de artigos utilizados em uma mesma área e aumentar o espaçamento entre eles. Criar novas seções com categorias específicas poderia diminuir a quantidade de conteúdo em um único lugar.

RUSSIA'S FIGHTERS ARE MURKINS MUITA MATERIA EM POUCO ESPAÇO

The photo, taken in Borodianka, a town near Kyiv, shows the woman sitting on a chair as rescuers desperately comb for survivors. According to locals, the Russians blocked rescue efforts, leaving people buried under rubble for a week. The shocking images come as Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov repeatedly refused to admit any wrongdoing and described footage of war crimes committed by Russian soldiers in Ukraine as 'fake' and 'lies'. Ukraine on Thursday said it had recovered 26 bodies from underneath two destroyed apartment buildings in the town of Borodianka, which is located in a heavily populated civilian area. Ukrainian President Zelensky warned tonight that the situation in Borodianka was 'more horrific than in Bucha.'

EXCLUSIVE Why does Prince Harry think he's safer in the Netherlands than UK? Ex-royal protection officer says duke faces larger threat at Invictus Games than Philip memorial service he claimed was 'too dangerous'

The Duke of Sussex (left yesterday) has made the decision to cross the Atlantic for The Hague after refusing to be with his British family at Westminster Abbey ten days ago (right). After being delayed by the pandemic, the next staging of the Invictus Games, an international sports competition for injured or sick military personnel and veterans from across the globe, will take place from April 16 to 22. Former Met Inspector Ken Wharfe, who was protection officer for Princess Diana, William and Harry, said Invictus' links to the military and former soldiers - common targets for terrorists including ISIS extremists - means the potential threat to them and Harry is arguably higher there than being in London for Prince Philip's service of thanksgiving on March 29. The High Court heard the duke did not feel safe in Britain without Scotland Yard officers with him. But Harry is still jetting across the world to The Hague. Police and security services in the Netherlands (inset) have refused to say whether he will get royal protection in Holland, although it is likely because one of the event's partners is the Dutch ministry of defence, which is also in charge of the country's security and terrorism. Ken Wharfe told MailOnline: 'I'm baffled about why Harry thinks he would be safer in the Netherlands than in the UK. He would have travelled to his grandfather's memorial service with his brother or father and received protection from the MoD. It's not like he would have been turning up at Westminster Abbey on a bike'. He added: 'The Dutch police will be doing their own security assessments and liaising with Harry's private security. But my view it is more of a risk to go to Holland to support a charity with a military link than coming to London last week.'

G1 - Site de notícias

Um ótimo exemplo de produto semelhante que melhora o UX apresentado é o G1. A funcionalidade do site é exatamente a mesma, apresentando uma página inicial, com uma listagem de notícias que ao click redireciona para uma página com a reportagem completa, porém oq diferencia esse produto do Daily mail, é sua clara preocupação com UX, sua barra de navegação é muito mais limpa e intuitiva, assim como a disposição de seu conteúdo se mostra muito mais inteligente e organizada, assim como uma responsividade que leva em conta não só o tamanho dos componentes mas o melhor posicionamento dos mesmos em telas menores.
